Our hair is as unique as each one of us is. At the same time, the appearance of your hair sends out a message, a statement that you make about who you are. That is one of the reasons why you need the best hair products to manage what Martin Luther King Jr. once referred to as "the richest ornament of women."•

There are many hair products available in the market, but you need to know exactly what's best for your hair and find the best hair products that will help you accomplish your goals.

For example, it can be pretty difficult to add volume and body to your hair, especially if you have fine hair. Whatever you do, your hair refuses to hold a curl and lies flat against the top of your head. You may feel that you need a permanent wave, but did you know that such permanent styles can harm your hair? It is not only easier, but also healthier to choose the right hair products to add volume to your hair.

The moot point, however, is that each individual has different needs. You need to determine the particular feature of your hair that you want to work on. While some want better moisture, others may want their hair to be more smooth and silky.

When it comes to hair products, there are four common types that you can buy. These are shampoos, conditioners, serums, and masks- but it is not a case of one size fits all. What is good for your friend may not be the right best hair product for you.

Shampoos are meant for cleaning your hair and getting rid of dirt and excessive oil. A good shampoo can make a world of difference to the appearance of your hair, while poor quality shampoos do more harm than good.

Conditioners are used after shampooing your hair and help keep your hair moist or soft since shampoos wash away your natural oils. Serums, on the other hand, are designed for treating your hair to make it healthier and shinier. Hair masks are the ultimate in hair care and used by people who like to treat their hair with excessive indulgence.

While you will find hundreds of brands selling each of these products, the best hair products are those that are made only from natural plant ingredients.

The active ingredients in conventional hair products that make huge claims are synthetic. These may give a silky appearance to your hair, but excessive use of these substances actually causes more harm than good in the long run. Petroleum-based polymers, silicone and synthetic colorants are known to cause irritation in the scalp, dandruff, and even hair loss.

On the other hand, plant based ingredients in organic hair shampoos, conditioners, and other hair products contain natural active compounds, vitamins, and minerals that are gentle on your hair and very effective in caring for your hair.

When you buy organic, you are not only buying the best hair products for yourself, but are also doing your bit for the safety of the planet. So go green, buy organic, save your hair, and do your bit for the well-being of our planet.
